Helping Government Work... Better

Information and knowledge management are tools that can create more efficient, more responsive government entities. Computer Document Management Systems (CDMS), a systems integrator specializing in document management, has designed and implemented a wide-range of EDMS and Optical Character Recognition (OCR) systems that make government efficiency a reality through document management and work-flow projects which improve accuracy, save time and optimize productivity.

Re-engineered the State Comptroller's office with an Information management system that implements state of the art imaging technologies, computer generated report management technologies, automated workflow technologies, automated print/fax server technologies, portal access, and more.

Created a secure system at the Commonwealth Technology Center (CTC) that enables thousands of state employees access to billions of pages of reports through the Internet.

The solutions also implemented in Pennsylvania and other states have allowed state agencies to:

- Implement document imaging systems handle computer-generated COLD data
- Engineer workflow systems
- Improve accuracy, efficiency through OCR
- Create Internet Portals
- CDMS frequently uses Abledoc software solutions to streamline government procedures, promoting efficiency, while ensuring the security and accuracy necessary in government duties. As a result, these agencies have reported savings in excess of millions of dollars per year, as well as eliminating weeks off of task time.
